Features

- IP authentication happens automatically on campus
- Shibboleth comes into place outside the IP authentication for remote access
- Authentication is performed by the IdP (Identity Provider), the institution
- Authorisation is controlled by the service provider and based on user attributes
- International standard
- Improved end-user security, as users place more value in the log-in credentials

Benefits for Users

- Improved and easy access from remote locations (user mobility)
- Users don't have to remember a separate username + password for accessing protected services – they simply use their institutional log-in (simplified access)
- Personal data kept between user and home organization (privacy of information)

Benefits for Libraries

- No need to maintain their own user database
- Therefore, less storage / processing of personal data
- Reduced user support requirements

Benefits for Publishers

- More security in users access control
- Minimum requirements for security measures
- No licence fee
